Instructions for Application for
Exclusion of Education Benefits as Working Condition Fringe
March 15, 2019

Section 132(d) of the Internal Revenue Code provides an income exclusion for the value of certain education benefits provided by an employer to an employee. To qualify for this working condition fringe benefit exclusion, each course must meet specific requirements including having a business connection to the employee’s current job. This exclusion might be available when:

1. An employee uses the Regents Scholarship Program for graduate level courses with a value in excess of $5,250 that would normally be included in taxable income, or
2. An employee takes a course at a non-University of Minnesota system education institution and the University is reimbursing the employee for the cost.

To request a review of whether a course qualifies for the working condition fringe benefit exclusion, the Application for Exclusion of Tuition Benefits as Working Condition Fringe must be submitted to the Tax Management Office by the employee’s Supervisor/Manager. A separate application is required for each course. The application must be submitted to the Tax Management Office by the billing due date for the course. Applications submitted after that date will not be considered for the exclusion. An exception to this time frame may be allowed when the $5,250 limit is not exceeded until the fall semester, but the employee took a spring semester class during the same calendar year that would qualify for the exclusion if the application had been timely filed. In this case, the application for the spring semester course will be due by the fall term’s billing due date.

Due to the risk of abuse, all signatures on the form will be required. The Human Resources Lead signature indicates the HR Lead discussed with the employee’s Supervisor/Manager the answers to the questions on the application and the relationship between the course listed on the application and the employee’s job responsibilities. If answers are not accurate, the employee and department will be liable for any assessments in the event of an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) audit. Additionally, if the exclusion is applied and the University subsequently finds that misrepresentations were made, the exclusion will be reversed, the Department will be charged applicable tax, and corrected W-2s will be issued to the employee and the IRS as needed. This could require an employee to file amended tax returns for the affected years.

Please see the Regents Scholarship Program Policy regarding requirements of the Regents Scholarship Program. Also see Tax Implications of Regents Scholarship Program for related information. Attach copy of Request for Regents Scholarship to this application when applicable.
